A 9-year-old boy from Bangladesh beat Magnus Carlsen to master the explosive claim feed

A 9-year-old boy from Bangladesh beat Magnus Carlsen to master the explosive claim feed

A 9-year-old boy from Bangladesh beat Magnus Carlsen to master the explosive claim feed

Bangladeshi boy's perfection in the world of chess Magnus Carlsen was defeated by the 9-year-old chess player of Bangladesh, Ryan Rashid Modha. Khude Dabadru has taken the chess world by storm with this remarkable feat in an online chess match.

The online match, which was played in a “bullet” format (where players have only one minute to complete their moves), took place on January 18 on Chess.com. That's when Muddha, a third-grader at South Point School in Dhaka, played using her coach Naeem Haque's account, as she didn't yet have her own profile or an official chess title. The result means Magnus Carlsen's rating drops by -16