The United Kingdom has made it clear that it will not become involved in the ongoing conflict between Iran, Israel, and the United States, British Prime Minister Keir Starmer said.

Responding to journalists on Monday, he stated that there are no plans to deploy British troops to the Middle East and no intention of conducting any military operations on Iranian territory. In his words, the UK has no involvement in this war.

Starmer also said the government is closely monitoring the situation and taking necessary defensive measures. The aim is to ensure the safety of British citizens, protect national interests, and support regional allies.

Highlighting the importance of the Strait of Hormuz, he said the UK will work to help keep the route open for navigation. However, he stressed that Britain must not be drawn into the conflict under any circumstances.
