A massive landslide has struck the Gyirong area along the Nepal-China border. At least 20 bodies have been recovered so far, while around 400 people remain missing, including more than 100 Indian tourists.

CCTV footage of the incident shows a huge amount of soil and debris suddenly rushing down from the mountain. Within moments, the road and surrounding areas were buried. Several people were also seen running to safety as the landslide swept through the area.

Following the incident, authorities in Nepal's Rasuwa district declared it a major disaster. Local officials fear that the death toll may rise further.

Rescue operations are ongoing. Foreign tourists are also reportedly among those missing, and the authorities are working to locate and rescue them.
