Director General of the Rapid Action Battalion (RAB), Md. Ahsan Habib Palash, has expressed his commitment to building the force into a more professional and respected institution. He said efforts would be made to place RAB in a dignified position at both national and international levels.

He stated that the force, comprising members from the armed forces, police, BGB, Coast Guard, and Ansar, has long been working to combat crimes such as drug trafficking, illegal arms trade, kidnapping, and robbery. He also mentioned that RAB is prepared to deal with any situation through modern technology-based operations.

The RAB chief said the force had faced controversy in the past due to certain activities, which he described as undesirable. He added that RAB now aims to further strengthen public trust through lawful and professional conduct in the future.

He further said that the force would be able to perform more effectively if it remains focused on special operations instead of being involved in every type of activity.
